Even in remote and exposed locations, the long-lasting and maintenance-free salt batteries can do their job reliably for decades. However, the operating temperature is also a disadvantage of this battery technology: Salt batteries need active heating to be ready for use. How can a battery that needs electricity be at all cost-effective?

The battery that should have been installed in the A-Class was a so-called salt battery. In contrast to most other batteries, in which the cathode and anode are immersed in a shared pool of liquid electrolyte, the electrolyte in a salt battery is a solid, namely a ceramic ion conductor based on sodium aluminum oxide.

Originally developed for electric cars, nowadays they supply mobile phone antennas with electricity, and tomorrow perhaps entire districts: The salt battery is a safe and long-lasting battery technology with huge potential.

The facilities cover the entire production of sodium metal chloride cells and complete batteries: Shaping and sintering of the solid electrolyte, production and of the cathode materials, cell assembly and testing, battery assembly and testing, system design and application integration including the battery management system.

The research collaboration began in 2016 when the Ticino-based salt battery manufacturer HORIEN Salt Battery Solutions, formerly known as FZSoNick, approached Empa. The company wanted to improve the ceramic electrolyte consisting of sodium aluminum oxide, also known as beta-alumina, in its battery cells as part of an Innosuisse project.
